

I am a resident of Indiana and am a firm supporter of the "no-call" list. It is my understanding that the Consumer Bankers Association is challenging the "no-call" list. I do not need my bank or credit card companies calling me to discuss the different services they offer. If my bank or credit card company cannot mail the information to me, or post it in the lobby so that I can read it when I choose to, then that is their issue. I do not want to be bothered at home with sales pitches. Please do not grant the CBA the ability to allow it's members to bother myself or my fellow Hoosiers who have chosen to be on the "no-call" list. Thank you for your time.
